Senior adult dinner held at Wise Temple

On Saturday, May 14, the senior adults of the Isaac M. Wise Temple gathered for their annual dinner with entertainment. This year's event featured Matt Snow, better known as the "Cincinnati Sinatra," who has delighted audiences with his Sinatra tributes since 1971.

The evening began with a welcome from the event's chairpeople, Sandy Desatnik, Nancy Goldberg and Barbara Mandell. After the more than 100 participants went through the buffet line, Rabbi Ilana Baden led a brief Havdalah service, which marked the end of Shabbat and the beginning of a new week.

As people enjoyed their meal, Snow, dressed as Frank Sinatra, performed his "dinner theater" act, and regaled the audience with a number of Sinatra melodies.

Throughout the show, Snow shared stories and information about Sinatra's life. At one point, he indicated that May 14 happened to be the anniversary of Sinatra's death. Upon hearing this piece of trivia, Nancy Goldberg remarked, "It is such a fitting tribute to this remarkable performer to enjoy his music on his yahrtzeit!"

"Mr. Snow was so personable, and everyone was tickled by his presentation," added Sue Voos, who is the chairperson of the Wise Temple Senior Adults. She continued, "As always, the Annual Senior Adult Dinner with Entertainment was a huge hit!"
